

Capacity Crowd Is Anticipated at First Undergrad Formal Tonight; Blake Sewell's Orchestra to Play

Committee Reports Sellout

Corsages Banned; Roses to Be Sold

Final plans have been completed for the Junior Prom, which will be held this evening in the Sir Arthur Currie Memorial Gymnasium. Dancing will begin at 10 p.m. and will continue till 3 a.m. to the strains of Blake Sewell's thirteen-piece Orchestra.

For this, the first formal McGill Dance of the season, the floor of the Gymnasium has been specially processed to ensure a good dancing surface. Tables will be arranged cabaret style with the orchestra at the north wall, leaving the entire centre of the floor available for dancing.

Tickets for the event are entirely sold out, and no further table reservations can be made. Dinner will consist of chicken salad with all the trimmings, and a large assortment of soft drinks will be available. The gym will be in the process of being decorated most of today, and anyone interested in helping in this connection will be welcome. In the opinion of the committee, it is expected that the decorations will be even more attractive than last year.

The committee is also greatly indebted to the decorative efforts of Joan Storey and Charley Mannings, and to Messrs. Tony Lewis and Sid Lithwick for their original designs. The motif will be a winter scene, with fir trees in abundance. The small lights on these trees will provide all the illumination for the dance.

The use of corsages is strictly forbidden, and anyone wearing them will be required to check them in the cloakroom with their wraps. In order to aid in the war effort, roses of all hues will be sold at fifty cents each during the dance, the proceeds going to the McGill War Fund. It is expected that the proceeds of these sales will be about 175 dollars.

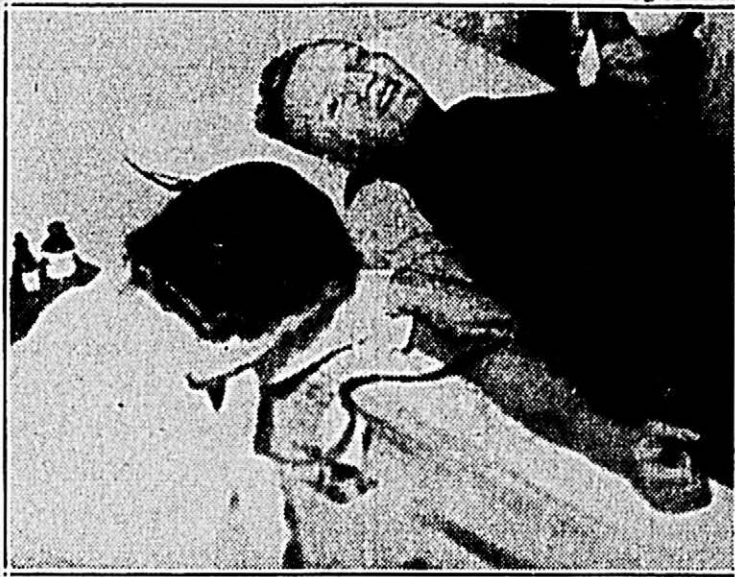

Parades Cancelled

Through the co-operation of the officers in charge of military training, Friday's C.O.T.C. parade was held Thursday and there will be no parade tonight. All M.R.T.B. parades for today and Saturday have been cancelled, in order to facilitate the putting up and removal of decorations. Special leave till 4 a.m. Saturday morning has been granted members of the McGill detachment of the R.C.A.F., in order that they might attend the Prom.

Patrons Listed

An impressive list of patrons will be on hand for the occasion, headed by Sir Edward Beatty, G.B.E., chancellor of McGill University, and Dr. F. Cyril James, Principal and Vice-Chancellor, and Mrs. James. Other patrons present will include: Lt.-Col. J. M. Morris, M.C., V.D., Commanding Officer of the C.O.T.C.; Capt. and Mrs. H. S. L. Western's Student Body In Favour of Conscription

College Declares For Drafting of Men and Wealth

According to a vote taken at the University of Western Ontario last week, the students there are five to two in favor of the conscription of man-power and four to one in favor of wealth conscription.

The poll was taken at the instigation of The Gazette, the University's weekly paper, and the questioning was conducted over the telephone. People appointed by The Gazette called approximately four hundred members of the student body in order to find their reactions to the questions of conscription of wealth and manpower.

For purposes of the vote, man-power was held to be "manpower as conscripted for soldiery and labour in essential war industries." Wealth in turn was used as "a term relevant to capital equipment, (capital) necessary to carry on an optimum war effort."

Two hundred and seventy-eight students favoured the adoption of manpower-conscription while one hundred and fourteen were opposed to the measure. Many of the students questioned were of the opinion that such conscription is already virtually in effect.

The vote on wealth was more decisive, with two hundred and ninety-seven supporting the measure and only ninety-five voting against it. It was observed that in proportion, more women were in favour of conscription than men. It was also noticed that among the men, and especially among the commerce students, some were equivocal about the conscription of wealth.

The poll is considered an indication of general student feeling since most of the student body of the Arts and Med Colleges were canvassed. The Seminarists and Ursuline Sisters were not included in the vote. Although they and many other students did not vote, the results are felt to be representative.

Dancers Invade Plumbers' Refuge To Present Films

Girls Sing While Engineers Look On And Add Comment

By M.E.

Just how far the Engineers have come from those Victorian days (which, incidentally, the Political Economy Club is still living in) when the female of the species was not allowed into their sacred abode was proven last night. For not only were the girls using Room 33 of the Engineering building but they were enjoying themselves to such an extent as to lift their sweet contraltos to the strains of "Coming thro' the Rye" and "Three Blind Mice."

The occasion was the presentation of films on the modern dance and the singing was in accompaniment to the rhythmic movements of the dancers who swept across the screen.

Although most of the reels were silent, this did nothing to lessen their enjoyment... thanks to the four Engineers who sat at the back of the room and provided a running commentary.

AICHe to See B-A Oil Plant

Will Inspect Montreal End Of New Pipe-line

The McGill University chapter of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers will pay a visit to the Montreal plant of the British-American Oil Company this afternoon. This trip, to include inspection of the Montreal end of the recently completed Portland-Montreal pipe line, is the second excursion to industrial plants made by the Society this term.

A special invitation has been extended by the chapter to the Women's Science Club to join them in this visit. The executive has announced that those in the Science Club, as well as A.I.C.H.E. members who wish to go on the trip should get in touch with Tom Daly, Allan Vroom, or Jack Ufford this morning. The party will leave the Chemistry Building shortly after 1:30 p.m. in a special coach.

The next meeting of the A.I.C.H.E. will be held in the Chemistry Building on Wednesday, December 10th. Several industrial films are to be shown, and arrangements will be considered for the projected trip to a local brewery and bottling plant.

Council Cons War Effort

Appeal Made For Data on Social Events

The Students' Council met last night; amongst the matters discussed were the reports of social activities of the campus clubs, the proposed trans-Canada dance next January, and the Medical Undergraduates Society's budget. Some matters of lesser import were discussed.

Only 40 per cent. of the organizations which received letters requesting an account of their projected social activities have replied. The information already received has been tabulated, and the Council is desirous of arranging a full and comprehensible report as soon as possible. Consequently Glenn Cowan, the Chairman, has issued an appeal to all clubs to send in the requisite information. It is necessary for the correlation of all events with the War Effort.

Among the agenda was the proposed Trans-Canada Red Cross Dance slated for January 23. All universities across the Dominion will, under the suggested arrangement, hold a small dance or other form of entertainment on that night, and, in the course of the evening, each college would take part in a trans-Canada broadcast. The proceeds would be turned to the use of the Red Cross.

The sum of 71 dollars was granted to the Medical Undergraduates Society at the acceptance of their budget, and the Society will draw 75 dollars from their bank balance on the understanding that it will be paid back from the receipts of the Medical Ball.

The War Savings Stamps Drive was given a grant of 25 dollars to aid in its campaign; the question of a new group seeking recognition was tabled till the next meeting, when it will be brought before the new council; permission was granted to a public school in Ohio to use the air of "Hail, Alma Mater" for its school song. Thereafter the Council adjourned.

Varsity Lays Down Over $1,000 In Dimes Within Eight Hours

Toronto, C.U.P.—$1,012.60 was collected at Toronto within eight hours in the course of a "March of Dimes" Drive there today. As cannon roared salutes and flash bulbs flared, Dr. H. J. Cody, the president of the University, opened the drive with a contribution of thirty-five dollars, and delivered a short inaugural address. During the course of the day, as crowds milled around the whitewashed line, Jan Masaryk, Minister of Foreign Affairs for the Czechoslovakian Government in exile laid out his contribution of forty dimes.

The drive is for the benefit of the International Student Service. This organization, as well as providing comforts for British and Canadian soldiers in German prison camps, is designed to aid the education of students whose facilities for study have been disrupted by the war. Necessity For Rationing Seen

Forced Savings And Deferred Pay Advocated

"Price Control, rationing, and a system of compulsory loans and forced savings," said Irving Sirken, fourth year economics honours student, "if we are to avoid inflation are needed," at the meeting of the Political Economy Club last night. The other speaker was A. Dubensky, also an honours economics student, who concentrated on the problem of rationing.

With the shortage of consumption goods arising from the diversion of production to war needs, the danger of inflation is ever present. Heavy taxation, stated Sirken, would not completely sponge up the excess cash which would remain after price control was initiated. This taxation also has its psychological drawbacks. Sirken advocated the Keynesian plan of deferred pay which would provide the extra purchase power.

Latvian Tribal Origin Traced

Post-War Status Of Small States Considered

Latvia was the topic of an address given yesterday by Ruth Nisse at the luncheon meeting of the Cosmopolitan Club held in the Union Grill Room.

Ruth opened her speech by remarking on the geographical position of Latvia. It is situated in northern Europe between Russia and Germany and this has had a marked effect on the history of this little land. In spite of her position, the people of Latvia are neither German nor Russian but the offspring of a very early tribe whom Ruth declared were "too weak to live and too strong to die."

In spite of frequent attacks and conquests from without, after the first World War, Latvia regained her independence and a national spirit grew up. But the people were unaccustomed to self-government and as soon as a strong leader came to the fore, Latvia became a dictatorship. Ruth emphasized that "we should free ourselves of the idea that all the small countries of Europe now under German domination such as Roumania, Latvia and France, were previously democracies" for this was not so. Feuermann Superb in Bloch's Schelomo

A magnificent modern work was given a superb performance on Tuesday night when Emanuel Feuermann played Bloch's cello rhapsody "Schelomo" with the orchestra of Les Concerts Symphoniques de Montreal. The work is unquestionably one of the greatest of all works for cello and Mr. Feuermann revealed himself again to be its great interpreter. The score is one of formidable difficulty and the orchestra, under Desire Defauw did wonders with it. That the audience enjoyed the rhapsody was evidenced by its response.

Ernest Bloch was born in Switzerland in 1880. As a boy he made a solemn vow that he would become a composer. "I wrote the vow on a scrap of paper," he writes, "buried it under a mound of stones, and built over it a bonfire. To have broken that vow would have been sacrilege."

This sense of the ritualistic and the semi-primitive, so early shown, has ever since remained with Bloch, and he combines with this sense a burning awareness of his ancestry. "Does anyone think he is only himself?" he asks. "Far from it. He is thousands of his ancestors." And Bloch lives with these ancestors in some of his greatest works. A composer of the present century he uses modern idiom and is an innovator, but spiritually and intellectually he is one with the past.

"Schelomo," a Hebrew rhapsody, is a reflection of the days of King Solomon. The spirit is of biblical asceticism, of brooding philosophizing and of deep-seated visionariness, which form in essence the spirit of Bloch. Bloch's is the voice of scriptural poetry, the poetry of unrest and protest that is always timely, the fierce intensity of Isaiah and Amos. It is more this feeling for the beauty and the depth of the Old Testament that fires the composer than racial consciousness. He uses no Hebraic folk music but rather creates the feeling of the ancient in his new music. Even his "Sacred Service" written for the Synagogue cannot be considered specifically Hebraic in expression.

Every evidence of great playing was present in Mr. Feuermann's performance, which revealed a deep feeling for the work. His magnificent lyricism and the depth of his tone rise to unparalleled heights. There are few contemporary artists whose playing I enjoy more than Mr. Feuermann's. Mr. Defauw and the orchestra did a really masterful job with the orchestral score which provides a luxuriant background to the more restrained solo passages.

Tchaikowsky's Cello Variations on a Roco Theme which are very interesting musically, combining the elegance, grace, refinement and ornamentation of eighteenth-century roco with the passionate nineteenth-century Russian art, made a charming medium for the exploitation of the soloist's prodigious technical accomplishment. The concert began with a group of Mozart works, in commemoration of the one-hundred-and-fiftieth anniversary of the death of Mozart. "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik," the composer's best-known serenade for strings, is perhaps the finest expression of all roco art and received a spirited performance that set a happy mood for the evening. The Jupiter Symphony, the last of the great trilogy of 1788 requires perhaps more subtlety in interpretation than the E flat and G minor, but the orchestra did well with it, although a larger string section might have helped to lend more body to the work. The concert ended with the tone-poem "Don Juan" by Richard Strauss. The more I hear the Strauss tone-poems the less I like them and Tuesday's performance, well done as it was, impressed me again with the paucity of ideas dressed in blatant and nebulous form, which is characteristic of Strauss.

This is the first of the orchestra's concert that I've heard this year and the fine development that the orchestra has shown under Mr. Defauw's direction was striking. One chief need stands out now—the string section might well be added to in the interests of optimal balance. But there is no doubt that the orchestra is taking its place beside the great symphonic bodies in America. —R. D. R.

Publisher's Notes

From Random House

Some idea of the scarcity of solid dramatic hits on Broadway this season can be gleaned from the fact that Random House, which usually publishes the new play successes a half dozen at a clip has yet to offer a single one this fall under its distinguished Rockwell Kentian imprint. Two smash hits are in the offing, however, in "Junior Miss," the Fields-Chodorov adaptation of Sally Benson's Book-of-the-Month Club novel, and Clifford Odets' "Clash by Night," and Random House promises to have them both in book form in time for holiday shoppers.

Further news about Sally Benson: "Junior Miss" is going to be a coast-to-coast radio feature, too, and Miss Benson herself is fashioning the scripts. She is also finishing a new book about home life in Saint Louis about 1905 that Random House will publish in the Spring under the title of "Meet Me in Saint Louis." (Remember the song? The writer of these notes will render it for you on the slightest provocation.)

Diana Forbes-Robertson, whose new book, "The Battle of Waterloo Road," was published by Random House on November 26th, is the wife of Vincent Sheean and the daughter of the late Shakespearean star, Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson and Lady Forbes-Robertson and sister of Maxine Elliot. Mr. Cert is authority for the statement that she is the most beautiful author in the world. She was in New York for the publication of her book, but Mr. Sheean is far off in Batavia, in the Dutch East Indies, collecting material for what is expected to be his most important work since "Personal History."

Donald Klopfer, toying with the binding design for one of the limited editions that Random House issues from time to time, told the story the other day of the English Lord who purchased an especially bound book from the great English binder, Sangorski, for £1,000 some years ago. A week after the book had been delivered to him, the Lord came back to Sangorski with a grave complaint. "Your precious binding has cracked straight down the back," he exclaimed. Sangorski tore the book from the Lord's hands, examined it for a moment, and turned on the Lord in a rage. "You've been reading this book!" he cried.

George Stewart, author of the new novel, "Storm," was stalled in an automobile in the middle of the Painted Desert when his publishers tried to reach him with the good news that the Book-of-the-Month Club had chosen his novel for December distribution. They finally caught up with him by a wire phoned from Gallup, New Mexico, to a souvenir shop in the Hopi reservation. Seems that both the phone operator at Gallup and the owner of the trinket emporium were subscribers to the Book-of-the-Month Club; they were waiting for Stewart with the local mayor and official photographer when his dust-caked caravan limped into town.

The advance sale on "Storm," including the Book Club printing, totalled 205,000 copies. Astronomical figures are being quoted for the picture rights. Random House, remembering Mr. Goldwyn's "Hurricane," would like to see him tackle "Storm." "He'd blow the audience clear out of the theatre with this one!" they say.

TOMORROW...

Tomorrow. A message into the minds of men, into each separate cave of prejudices, A meaning Shall be sated in cranial convolutions, And believed. As the lies to little children are believed And rendered ineffectual: So the child waxes mighty, Believing in humpty-dumpty. A day of national rejoicing will be declared; And the bars of the prisons be unbarred, So that the guards will sit in the sun all day playing jacks, And the twisted brains come into the streets of the city And mingle with ours indistinguishably, Throwing confetti. The lame shall be commanded to walk, And the wounded shall be ordered not to suffer. We shall be supplied with whistles to be blown On corners, and babies To kiss. If there be any unhappy, They shall forfeit their whistles and pay fines To the treasurer of the union. STREET CORNER

A picture of a corner, of a narrow dirty street; A neon-lighted drugstore, a bum in broken shoes; Shabby rooming-houses, and a kid who sells the news; A dirty, draggled corner, with nothing clean or neat. Dampened down with rain, dejected and forlorn, A tree with scanty leaves is hemmed by cobbled tracks Where noisy streetcars clatter, full of sulky blacks, And sleek cars spatter puddles with raucous whoop of horn. A billboard-bounded corner, with a cheap quick-lunch cafe; A playground too for dirty kids, Polish kids and Wops Who fight and run with shouts of "Cheese it! Cops!" No tiled hamburger stands can make the dullness gay. This picture comes in slick-toned print today—A haunting voice from home—so far away. —Argosy Weekly.

AJUS LOCUTUS

The God eternal cedar preached a funeral today. The sea waves rang a knell And cast a spell of sorrow On the day. The sparrows twittered fretfully in plaint—The wind wailed. The leafless trees shivered—The sun paled. The treeless leaves withered up in faint. The clouds frother and cried; Summer died. And wheat stacks stand, yet unbound As tombstones On the frosted blackened ground. —Athenaeum.

A chance remark, overheard by the mother of a small boy, was repeated by her to the father. "John, it's positively shameful the way Junior talks," she said. "I just heard him say: 'I ain't never went nowhere.'" "Shameful," raged the father, "it's worse than that! Why, the young whelp has travelled twice as much as most youngsters his age!" —Daily Athenaeum.

The Realm of Sport
by adam

All the hither and yon around the campus about this Student Opinion Poll of the various colleges under the C.I.A.U. is certainly getting its share of attention, but it can be said right now in bold letters that nothing will come of it. No matter what student opinion is on the question of inter-college exhibition games and outside games, it has previously been ordained that nothing of the sort will be attempted by the authorities of any college. This will have to stand, and no amount of student wire-pulling is going to make the higher-ups forsake their original policy, although we must admit that it could come in for a little revision.

It looks like the ski season is here as by the notices we see the Laurentian Zone Ski Night is scheduled for this evening. It will be the initial meeting of the year, and the three clubs of Montreal together with McGill students will be in for a fine evening. No doubt the Prom will interfere with many a student from taking this in, but there should be some there to partake of the festivities. Remember the place is the Park Toboggan and Ski Clubhouse on Mount Royal.

The report the other day of the safe arrival of Shan Dunn from the cold waters of the North Sea after being forced down in aerial combat, brings to two, the number of former McGill students that have been reported on within the last little while. A few weeks ago Bob Keefer, well known Red footballer, was reported downed in Elre, with no serious injury. The mishap to Dunn, a former McGill Daily Sports Editor, brings the war that much closer to us when we see our former colleagues narrowly escaping catastrophe.

Meanwhile in the National Hockey League, the Canadians are still perched in the cellar, but with the acquisition of the razzle-dazzle line of the Royals, seem headed for more formidable surroundings. They had to sign them at a high price according to all reports, but our impression of the trio last Saturday against Boston is, that they were well worth what ever they got. O'Connor, Heffernan and Morin play the same kind of game that reminds us of the former McGill Redmen such as Nels Crutchfield, Jack McGill and Kenny Farmer, who formed that hipper-dipper line of the early 1930's.

The basketball being played up at the Gym these nights is of a very high calibre and Van Wagner must wince when he sees the rich material that he could use for his Intercollegiate teams if such were possible. The referees are not too strict with the play and as a result, you get a wide open performance that is highly entertaining. Four or five games are run off each night and two or three on Saturdays, and this will have to be kept up because this new Interplatoon system has a great many teams to take care of.

Laurentian Zone Invites Skiers to Park Slide

Tonight at 8.30 the Park Toboggan and Ski Clubhouse will be the scene of a "get-together" party open to all skiers of the Laurentian Zone. McGill skiers are therefore invited, and will be admitted free of charge on showing their 1941-1942 First Aid Badges, which will be on sale at the door at the usual price of 25 cents. This will be one of those evenings, the secret of which is known to all true skiers, with sing song, dancing and ski movies. One of these will feature well known Hannes Schneider in a Ski Chase, and there will also be action shots showing the performances of the zone's local stars.

Marines Swamp Macmen In Bruising Hockey Tilt

Earl Smith Scores Twice For Winners

In a razzle dazzle wide open hockey game played yesterday at the Forum, the flashy Marines of the McGill Intercompany Hockey League trounced the rugged and hard checking Macdonald College sextet to the tune of 6-1.

EXCITING CONTEST

Both teams displayed mid season form as they spared no checks, and the rival goalies were kept busy throughout the contest. It was a much more exciting game than the one on Wednesday between the Navy and Artillery, and stamped the charging Marines as a real threat for this year's Intercompany supremacy. The game however was much closer than the score would indicate as the Aggies really had to open up in the closing minutes in an attempt to get close, and the Marines garnered two more tallies to build up an imposing score.

SMITH SCORES 2

For the winners Earl Smith shone with two neat goals, the first coming in the first period on a flip shot from close in, and the second midway through the last period when the Aggies were short handed. Macdonald connected with their single tally in the middle frame when Malevitch scored from a scramble in front of the Marines' goal.

The other scorers for the victors were Cleary on a pass from Chown, and Wake unassisted in the second period, and Smith for his second goal and Summerby in the last frame to round out the scoring.

NAVY VS. AGGIES

The next game on the schedule will see the same Macdonald aggregation take on the Navy squad who opened with a 6-3 victory against the Artillery, and this game will take place next Monday at the Forum at 12.30 p.m. The sailors will try to make it two straight while the Aggies will be gunning for an opening victory. It should be a humdinger.

Movies, sing song and dancing will be the order of the evening, all for the price of a First Aid button, as well as that friendly atmosphere common to all these ski-nights. All members of the Outing Club being connected with the Laurentian zone, may attend.

There will also be a meeting of all M.O.C. members interested in competitive skiing, in the Music Room of the Union at 5.00. Entries in both Intercompany and Zone meets will be discussed.

Coed Cagers In Play-off

A-2 Hoopsters Down B-1 20 to 8

Sections A-2 defeated B-1 cagers yesterday evening in a coed basketball play-off at the Memorial Gym. Several spectators were on hand, and despite the fact that the slide door which separates the Gym slowly rolled shut before the game, a small door in one of the panels gave the boys an excellent view.

The play in the first quarter was exceptionally slow. A-2 showed better organization, as a team, and started off with an 8-0 lead. Actually, the only excitement during this quarter was caused by the bouncing of a ball on a player's head, with no damage done to either. The second quarter saw a little more action, especially near the A-2 basket. The defence play was very strong on both teams here, but the B-1 forwards were somewhat below par in the passwork. B-1 had no substitution whatever throughout the entire game.

Connie Silver started the second half by sinking a basket for B-1. There was very little fumbling of the ball, and the play speeded up considerably. During the last 2 minutes, however, there was one mad scramble right across the floor, when the ball seemed to do a bunny hop from hand to hand, and no one could hold onto it.

The last quarter slowed down to the tempo of the beginning of the game, with A-2 scoring a 20-8 triumph over their opponents. The line up was as follows—B-1 forwards: Nancy Taylor, Connie Silver 4, Dorothy Koch 4; guards: Joan Waterston, Babs Cagney, Myrian Knubley. A-2 forwards: Gerry Sawers 10, Donna Merry 6, Myrie Moore 4; guards: Marge Williams, Grace Prosopio, Barbara Smith. Alternative players: Ann McCort, Carol Walsh.

There was fine teamwork throughout the game on the part of the A-2 forward section. A considerable factor in slowing up the game was the general disorganization of the teams, and a particularly bad habit on the part of some of the co-eds of bouncing the ball without any reason every time they received a pass.

Miss Buchanan was the referee.

Necessity for Rationing Seen

chasing power which would be needed to give industry after the war the incentive needed to start its wheels rolling in the production of consumers' goods.

Speaking on the need for rationing, Dubensky stated that rationing was a supplementary device adopted in order to divert the country's energies as much as possible to the war effort. Here are the purposes which rationing would set out to accomplish. Firstly, it would distribute in an equitable manner the burden falling on the population as a result of the shortage of consumption goods. Secondly, it would aid in the diversion of the economy from a peace to a war basis. Thirdly, it would divide in a fairer proportion the burden arising from a shortage of raw materials, capital goods and labor. In the fourth place, rationing would aid in the diversion of consumable goods from the domestic to foreign markets and the resultant inflow of exchange. Fifthly, a policy of rationing would aid in insuring that there will be sufficient supplies of foodstuffs and clothing for the lower-income groups.

Dr. Day of the Economics department then commented on the papers delivered, following which a spirited discussion took place on the efficacy of the Keynesian proposal of forced loans and deferred pay.

In closing Ruth suggested as a topic for discussion: What should happen to these small countries after the war? Should they be given their independence and left to go their own way, or should they be formed into a united states of Europe.

Dancers Invade Plumbers' Refuge

In fact, every time such artists as Martha Graham, Doris Humphrey, or Charles Weidman went into their dance and the girls lost themselves in the ecstasy of the dancers' movements, a voice would interrupt with a "Don't you like that slinky movement" or "Boy, can she wriggle." Really those Engineers have no esthetic soul whatever.

"How can I learn the modern dance?" Well, it's very, very simple. You can do anything... from praying to murdering, from fishing to football... provided you do it gracefully. Particularly when you go flying through the air, and land in a heap, you must remember to be graceful.

Just what effect these films will have on the coeds is difficult to predict, but if you had walked down the Campus last night in the fog, you would have seen two lasses doing their best to imitate the ladies on the screen. The only thing they didn't try was the falling down. The ground was wet, and besides there weren't any Engineers around to pick them up.

Urquhart Will Teach McGill Skiing Again

Fred Urquhart is making another stab at teaching McGill students to ski this year, and his first lesson took place in the Pine Avenue gym the other afternoon.

Under the sponsorship of the McGill Outing Club about 30 candidates were out for the first lesson. This consisted mainly of introduction work although Fred says that serious conditioning exercises will be in effect this week. Until the skiing season really gets under way he will give only one lesson a week but along about the middle of January, McGill skiers can count on two to three sessions a week up on the mountain.

Last year Fred had charge of McGill's O.T.C. skiers, but due to poor organization in getting those who did want to learn to ski out on specific afternoons, the program was not very successful.

Fred will also conduct three classes for high school girls up on the mountain on Saturday mornings. He did this last year.

'S's' REPLACE 'R's'

A drastic and startling change occurred recently which promises to affect the lives and attitudes of every American student.

The traditional and long-accepted three "R's" have been replaced by the three "S's" after extensive scientific research, followed by rabid debates on the part of the members of the American Institute for the Preservation, Development and Proper Distribution of Vitamins.

Swing, slang and sandwiches constitute the three "S's" of American youth, and promise to occupy high and important places in the American folklore that is now in the making.

Psychologists, when approached for their views on the subject balk—it is too deep for them to fathom—yet they have admitted that this oddly-matched trio is possibly responsible for the inimitable and enviable American vitality probably plays the greatest part in the forming of personalities and dispositions of millions of youngsters from high school to college ages.

Startling, isn't it? And yet almost before their importance has been realized these typically American "S's" are undergoing changes in the light of the National Defense program. This is true because authorities on the subject realize the importance of perfect unity in every line if the defense program is to succeed.

Jitterbugs are no longer kicking their heels (and innocent bystanders) to savage rhythms... Swing has gone militant! Slang reflects the social thought of our youths... it is of the blitzkrieg-dive-bomber nature. And now even the sandwich "goes vitamin" in a large, constructive, and filling way.

Dr. Tom D. Spies, professor of medical research at the University of Texas, and the University of Alabama, associate professor of medicine at the University of Cincinnati and world-famous for his fight on pellagra in the mal-nourished areas of the South, recommends a "Victory" sandwich... peeled wheat bread and yeasted peanut butter.

"A combination of this bread and yeasted peanut butter," Dr. Spies told a conference of vitamin experts at the University of Chicago recently, "is a most effective or therapeutic agent."

"Such a product, peanut butter, when combined with up to 20 per cent. of brewer's yeast, is a rich source of the natural vitamins of the B complex, and a good source of protein, fat and calories as well. Peeled wheat bread, produced by the Earle flotation process of manufacture, which removes only 2 per cent. of the whole grain, is mighty health-giving stuff in its own right."

ENGINEERS ENJOY MOVING PICTURES

Imagine yourself on a bridge of steel and concrete some 2,000 feet from the end and hundreds of feet above the surging waters of the Tacoma Narrows. Imagine this bridge swaying to and fro and tilting at angles nearly 45 degrees from the horizontal. Imagine this, for this was the position that some 300 Engineers found themselves in last Thursday night.

At first, the forty-beer men were under the impression that they were on their way back over the High Level from their annual banquet, but later learned that they were witnessing the pictures of the Tacoma Bridge Disaster of last November.

These pictures were the feature attraction of the second Engineer smoker to be held this year. Held in Med 142, the meeting proved to be one of the most interesting and entertaining ever staged. Under the direction of President Norman Grant, assisted by B. J. Anderson, Bob Inkpen and Louis Grimble, the evening's entertainment included three movies and a sing-song.

Prof. "Fighting Bob" Hardy explained the present theories on the cause of the Tacoma Bridge failure. The pictures were taken by the Engineering Department of the University of Washington and reproduced by the Engineering Institute of Canada.

Wherever a wind of as low as four miles per hour struck the bridge at a small angle to the horizontal it set up in it a series of vibrations which caused the centre span of the structure—which was some 2,800 feet in length—to twist and roll. As soon as the bridge was built these wave-like motions began to take place, and started U.S.A. engineers investigating as to how they could be overcome. But on November 8th—just four months after the completion of the structure—a 42-mile-an-hour wind caused the collapse of the whole centre span. The failure of the $1,000,000 structure promises to interest engineering research for many years to come.

The production of 32-ton tanks was the subject of the second film. It showed how the Chrysler Corporation of America pooled its vast resources to rush output of war material for Uncle Sam. A $20,000,000 tank manufacturing plant and arsenal was followed through all stages of its development. This plant was designed, erected and in manufacture inside of six months.

She called her gown a poem. We do not wish to slam. But judging from its beauty It seemed an epigram.

Prof.—Tell me, what's become of your ethics?

Stude—Oh, sir, I traded it in for a Ford.

He took her in his arms. And pressed her to his breast. The lovely color left her face. And lodged on his full dress.
